Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Impressions of Westminster Abbey: Illustrated d104 to Accompany Seven Etchings To the not too critical stranger all will be glorious, and to the thoughtful archaeologist and artist all will be interesting, even should it be felt impossible to admit that the memories of so many famous men have here always been perpetuated in the best manner or in the best taste. We shall have something more to say about the monuments presently, but let us first contemplate the abbey as a building, not in the complete sense of an architectural analysis, but rather as a first impression upon the artistic mind. Let us enter by the North Porch, the only one now used in this year of grace 1885, when the dynamite scare has caused to be closed to the public the West Entrance, as well as that by the Poets Corner. The great transept in all its length will be before us, and impressive enough it is in its proportions; the white marble statues, busts, and monumental slabs, however, considerably marring the general effect. The non - artistic public will turn to the right and left to admire the statues and monuments, all rather more than less modern, in the whole transept, the north end devoted to monuments of statesmen, and the south to those of poets and men of letters generally, and hence called the Poets Corner. In speaking of Westminster from an artist's point of view, I should like to imagine all these modern monuments and statues away, consigned to some other great national mausoleum or Campo Santo, and instead of them, here and there some tombs with recumbent figures and beautiful...
