Excerpt from Radicalism Vindicated: Letter of Senator Drake, of Missouri, to Senator Johnson, of Maryland Hon. Reverdy Johnson: Dear Sir: There has come to me, under your frank, a pamphlet by A Marylander, the comprehensive title of which is given above. Its having so come, and its sentiments and style, led me to ascribe its authorship to you; and in this I am confirmed by information to that effect from a citizen of Baltimore. It is this in part, if not mainly, which impels me to this notice of the document. Common men may write and print what they please, and do little harm; but not so with one of your high position and distinguished reputation. Though cheerfully admitting my inferiority to you in the latter respect, I propose, for the sake of truth and right, an examination and discussion of some positions assumed in this pamphlet, which I consider to involve grave and serious errors of fact and of doctrine. I agree with you in your opening proposition, that no reflecting citizen can be insensible to the dangerous condition of the country. But when we attempt to assign causes for that condition we diverge, not again, I fear, to come together. And as you and I diverge, so do the people. The loyal men of the nation trace with exact precision and with immovable conviction all our dangers to that rebellion, to sustain which Maryland, though nominally not engaged in it, sent so many men and so much money, and in behalf of which her disloyal people shed, in the streets of your own city, the first blood of that terrible four years war. On the other hand, disloyalists of...
