Hookham Poetry Library (Vol. I) (Paperback)

By Sandra J Hookham, Thomas E Hookham

Multeity Books, United States, 2011. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .The Hookham Poetry Library (Vol. I) consists of a wide range of cleverly rhymed poems: from epic to epigram; inspirational to down right funny; happy to sad; tender and touching to brazen and witty; and from carefree fantasy to parable. IT S TODAY SO REMEMBER-- IT S-- Good when someone leaves their mark, Great we all possess some spark, Of talents beaming bright and new-- TODAY-- When troubles glare through the dark, And we wantonly wish to disembark, For rewards at times seem scattered and few. SO-- If you think the race is run, That battles now have all been won, And future dreams might well escape you-- REMEMBER-- For some the world has just begun, And nothing that is said and done, Counts so much as what you ve yet to do. -----

----- If you like to ponder the past, then you will love--- DUST COVERED AMBROSIA (30 stanzas) ----- Which ends with ----- Such memories may tickle the senses. Leaving behind a definite yearning, To cross back over those vanishing fences That time and neglect are slowly burning. But remember...
