Excerpt: . . . its most plastic form; three years in which to receive the false ideas that are inseparable from institution life. Experience within the State by private agencies, and outside by public as well as private agencies, has fully demonstrated this fact, that a judicious and systematic effort to place these children in family homes will be crowned. with a good measure of success. There are occasionally cases brought to the attention of the Humane Society, where the removal of the children temporarily will enable the parents to recover themselves, either by lightening their load of care for a season, or by stimulating them to better efforts by placing before them the incentive to recover their children. I am a firm advocate of a change in our State laws, to be most carefully guarded however, that would enable or require the officials of our homes to receive...
