The question of taste is a thing of acquired habit. Animal food has a high flavor and will appeal to the nostrils and palate, but it is not more nourishing or strengthening by reason of its savory taste. Animal food is more expensive, difficult to preserve and transport, and dangerous if not fresh killed. The lion and wolf depends on animal food exclusively, or nearly so, for the reason of inability to get different food. The elephant and ox feeds exclusively on plant food. Man will experiment to find what is pleasant, favorable and convenient for health, regardless of the animal. What the animal eats will be neither a reason for or a reason against what man will prove by experiment...
