He loves to play football, watch football and even dreams about football. In his dreams Shane s the hero of the match but like all dreamers poor Shane has to wake up. Shane is desperate to win a place on the school football team. But there s something stopping him, and that something is a very grouchy football coach called old Hobbler who doesn t think Shane s good enough. CROSS-EYED CATS AND ONE-LEGGED-NUNS Recently, old Hobbler took Shane aside after the game and told him that he d seen grannies, cross-eyed cats, and one-legged-nuns with better headers than Shane! Of course, Shane was wondering where old Hobbler saw one-legged nuns playing football but he didn t dare ask him. Nobody ever questioned anything old Hobbler said - at least not to his face. Old Hobbler went on to say that Shane would have a chance of getting on the team if he practiced at home, especially his header. STRIKE ACTION After what old Hobbler said all the lads laughed at poor Shane. He tries to get his parents to help him but all his dad wants to do is read his books in peace while dunking ginger biscuits in his tea . His mum s too busy fighting the war on cellulite by stretching herself into strange and bendy yoga shapes. Determined Shane is forced to take drastic action - strike action, but even that doesn t get his parents out of the house and into the garden....
